Salamun read in item (No. 18PL061) A request by KTM Design Solutions, Inc. for Zeus Land Holdings, LLC for a Preliminary Subdivision Plan for proposed Lots 1, 2A thru 4B, 11A thru 14B, 15 thru 19, 20A thru 26B of Block 1 of Stoney Creek Reserve, generally described as being located southeast of the intersection of Overview Road and Nugget Gulch Road. In response to a question from Drew, Tech said he would let Mr. Treloar speak to the type of soil testing that will be done. Tech stated to his knowledge there has not been any geotechnical testing done. Treloar said the first step would be to hire a geotechnical consultant and they will do bore holes which means they will drill to the depths that KTM has already noted and identify all of the stratum in all of the layers of the properties in those soil types. KTM will take that information and incorporate that into the design. The design will take into account the cut and the fill of this material and the appropriate placement of this material and that will be done to the City of Rapid City’s standards and will include the City’s testing requirements too. He stated they have done several bore holes already to identify what they have on the site which did include some limited site stability information which came back positive. Drew asked what happens if there is site instability. Treloar said they design the roads and the infrastructure and they have to look at the steepness of the slopes and what they need to be compacted to. He said there are more tests required when the building permits are taken out to build the homes which will provide recommendations for each one of these homes. He said an example would be expansive clay, in which they would over excavate and bring in engineered fill or do specialty foundations. He assured the council that the geotechnical engineers would provide information on recommendations for each of the homes. Drew asked if surrounding homeowners had been approached to see their views on the development. Treloar said they had not contacted anyone. Drew suggested reaching out to the neighbors. In response to a question from Modrick, Treloar said they would take the stipulations and follow them starting with geotesting and having additional holes drilled in order to give them the recommendations that are needed before they start building. Modrick asked what the assurance was for the homeowners below that the dirt won’t be pushed onto their property. Treloar explained the soil is benched into the slope and they will have erosion control that could include waddles or silt fence or whatever is necessary to limit any kind of migration of stormwater. They keep a close eye on this if anything should happen. They have their erosion plans and site plans to make sure it’s done right. Modrick asked if the geotesting would show if KTM would need soil nails or retention walls. Treloar said the geotechnical engineers would come back with recommendations on how to build the slope if there are any concerns. Treloar confirmed the soil studies are submitted to the City along with the construction plans to ensure KTM is meeting all of their stipulations. In response to a question from Laurenti, Tech said this is a process that happens on every subdivision. He said there is a geotechnical analysis, design work, and soil research. Tech stated that Public Work’s primary concern is that the public infrastructure is built to standard. The roadways, the drainage, the utilities will all be owned and managed by the city eventually. When it comes to the private property, the engineers, the geotechnical engineer, and the homeowner have access to that information and they all have an interest on how the project gets done. Tech does not see any glaring issues now but when the engineering portion is done that will give him an indication as to what and how the homes will be built. Motion was made by Nordstrom, second by Laurenti to approve with stipulations. In response to a question from Nordstrom, Treloar said his staff engineer will be in charge of the stormwater management plan. Treloar said KTM would start the design process which includes the stormwater management plan, the infrastructure construction plans, and the geotechnical report. Nordstrom wants to make sure they do the best they can to mitigate gravel or anything getting into the streets. In response to a question from Nordstrom, Young said the project does follow the master plan for the project area and it also meets all the zoning requirements and the 17 stipulations that have been designated in staff report are sufficient to cover the concerns that have been expressed. In response to a question from Modrick, Golliher said if KTM is looking into the soil stability and they do what is proper in the area, then he has no concerns. Drury recognized Cody Schmidt and asked what his concerns were. Schmidt said he lives on Nugget Gulch and his property borders this development. His biggest concern is the short-term and long-term stability of this project. He said the hill is currently uncontrollable with the stormwater. He said silk fences and waddles have not helped. He has had to rectify this situation twice already. He does not want to spend his own money fixing it for the third time. Motion passed 7-1 with Modrick voting no, with the following
