Review Historic Preservation Commission Websites and discuss future online educational programming
Hanzel reviewed the two Historic Preservation websites and noted that they are not used very much. She noted that the City’s new website does not include the 11.1 Review process but it could be added. She also reviewed the associated costs for the two websites.

DeMersseman suggested that the 11.1 Review process be added to the City’s website and that the Commission consider other methods of social media for promoting historic preservation in Rapid City.

In response to a question from Nordstrom, Hanzel advised that TDG’s report shows declining use of picturercpast.com, which was started in 2012. She advised that Robert Sharp & Associates will do an analysis report for $85 if the Commission’s decides to have one done. She noted that they indicated that there are not a lot of user numbers. A brief discussion followed.

Riker expressed his opinion that publishing documents on the City’s website would be the easiest and most cost effective way to inform the public about the historic preservation requirements.

DeMersseman and Neiles volunteered to look at other options that would be available.

Hanzel stated that no action is necessary until the next meeting. She noted she will look at the process for terminating the contracts and websites.
Discuss educational outreach strategy for 2016-17 grant funds and Preservation Month taking place in May Hanzel briefly reviewed the available grant funds and noted that $6,000 is available for workshops, training, education outreach, etc. She noted that the Commission needs to consider the projects they would like to work on during the current grant period.

In response to a question from Riker, Hanzel explained that the Draft Report of the East of 5th Street Survey could be available in March or April and could possibly be tied into the month of May for Preservation Month.

DeMersseman suggested that we could organize walking tours of the downtown area and east of 5th Street area and possibly do some workshops for home improvements.

Hanzel suggested that another training session could be held for local contractors. She added that the contractors could receive education credits for the training.

Monroe reminded the Commission that the public will need to be informed about the Downtown Façade Restoration Program if and when it is approved. A brief discussion followed.

Downtown Façade Restoration Program
